DVAR TORAH

Divrei Torah from VAYIGDAL MOSHE, divrei torah of HaGaon HaKadosh HaRav Moshe Twersky Zt"l Hy"d

Emes Ma Nehedar    כח:י    ויקח מאבני המקום

Yaakov departs from Be'er Sheva to begin his family and establish Bnei Yisrael. When night fell and Yaakov Avinu was forced to sleep in the open, he took twelve stones and laid them under his head. In the morning, he awoke and found that they had become one. Chazal tell us that this was alluding to the twelve righteous children that he would bring into the world, and no corruption would develop from him.

The famous question is asked: Why did Yaakov merit to have 12 righteous children, while both Avraham and Yitzchak had Yishmael and Eisav respectively?

The reason stemmed from the middah which they each embodied. Avraham represented chesed. Although chesed is an amazingly wonderful thing, it is possible to sometimes take kindness too far. You can have "chesed gone wrong". So too, with the middah of gevurah, which is the power of control. Control is meant to manifest primarily as self-control, but the middah of control can also go wrong. However, emes, the middah of Yaakov avinu, can never go wrong. There is no emes that one can take too far.

We find that Yishmael was entrenched in immorality. We also find that some immorality is considered a chesed, e.g. marrying one's sister. This is because giving, in that way, to one's sister is the ultimate chesed, but it is chesed that has been taken too far. It's chesed gone wrong.

Similarly Eisav took the middah of control - which Yitzchak used for self-control - and he used it to control others. He took this attribute and misdirected it in order to satisfy his own needs. In this way, the middos that Avraham and Yitzchak stood for were misdirected by one of their children.

But the middah of emes cannot be corrupted, so all of Yaakov's children were tzaddikim. Lesson: Perhaps the most important thing we can teach our children is to always seek and pursue the truth.
